Dan was diagnosed with muscular dystrophy in 1991. As a result, he developed severe cardiomyopathy and was told he would need a heart transplant in 10 to 15 years. In 1998, his condition deteriorated and he was put on the transplant list. In September 1999, he received the call that a donor heart had been found. Dan is very thankful to his donor family for being given the opportunity to see his children grow up.

"Even though my MD keeps progressing and will make it necessary to be in a wheelchair, the doctors are very sure that the new heart will not be affected. I will be the happiest and luckiest guy in a wheel chair that you will ever see."
