Annika was born with Biliary Atresia, a liver disease affecting only newborns. She was placed on the transplant list at just 6 weeks old after an unsuccessful surgery. Shortly after her first birthday, her condition worsened and she was given only one week to live without a transplant. Five days later, Annika received a new liver, but several months later she developed a post-surgical clot, which required a second transplant. Her mother's cousin donated a section of his liver for Annika's second transplant. Thanks to the generosity of two donors, Annika has grown into a happy 7-year-old girl.
